[Initiating Landmark Designation - Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company Building - 447 Battery Street]

Resolution initiating landmark designation under Article 10 of the Planning Code for the Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company Building at 447 Battery Street.

WHEREAS, Under Planning Code, Section 1004.1, the Board of Supervisors (Board) may by Resolution initiate landmark designation; and

WHEREAS, The existing building at 447 Battery Street was constructed in 1907 at its current location in the present-day Financial District, an area of San Francisco that was largely industrial and commercial in character around the turn of the twentieth century and effectively leveled by the earthquake and fires that devastated much of San Francisco in 1906; and

WHEREAS, Following the 1906 earthquake disaster, members of San Francisco's political and business spheres raced to rebuild areas within and adjacent to downtown San Francisco, including the existing building at 447 Battery Street; and

WHEREAS, Upon its construction, the existing building at 447 Battery Street expressed the relatively straightforward design of an industrial warehouse, with a minimal level of external architectural ornamentation, which was limited to the evenly spaced bands of segmental arched windows at the Battery Street and Merchant Street facades as well as the simple belt courses that spanned these same facades between the third story and the roofline; and

WHEREAS, The firm that initially occupied the subject building upon its construction in 1907 was Thierbach and Company, a medium-sized, San Francisco-based coffee roasting and wholesaling company led by Charles Frederick Thierbach, which changed its name to the Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company when Michael P. Jones joined the firm in 1912; and

WHEREAS, The Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company contributed to the active local coffee industry in San Francisco, which represented a significant commercial sector in San Francisco during the second half of the nineteenth century and the first decades of the twentieth century; and

WHEREAS, The design of the Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company is attributed to Frank S. Van Trees, a classically trained Bay Area architect who was responsible for works elsewhere in San Francisco, whose simplified architectural scheme at 447 Battery Street aligned with the building's utilitarian warehouse function; and

WHEREAS, The setting of the Jones-Thierbach Coffee Company Building experienced a substantial shift in character during the post-World War II period, when the San Francisco Redevelopment Agency pushed forward plans to demolish a large portion of the city's produce market district - located near the waterfront immediately east of the subject building - and construct the Golden Gateway Redevelopment Project; and

WHEREAS, The trend toward urban development in support of commercial and financial firms displaced a number of the remaining industrial and warehousing businesses near the waterfront north of Market Street; and

WHEREAS, The building at 447 Battery Street is a relic of the industrial and mercantile history of San Francisco and illustrative of the massive efforts to reconstruct downtown San Francisco following the widespread destruction caused by the 1906 earthquake and fires; and

WHEREAS, The building at 447 Battery Street survived Redevelopment and was later surveyed and listed in the 1968 book Here Today: San Francisco's Architectural Heritage, which was subsequently adopted by the San Francisco Board of Supervisors through Resolution No. 268-70, and therefore qualifies as an official local historical register under CEQA; and

WHEREAS, The building at 447 Battery Street has historical significance to San Francisco's coffee industry and is the only building known to remain in the industry's hub north of Market Street that was used for coffee roasting and warehousing, and stands as a significant built-environment remnant that signifies San Francisco's economy and urban form during the first half of the twentieth century; and

WHEREAS, The building at 447 Battery Street is architecturally significant because of its status as a rare remaining example of a brick commercial building and warehouse in the present-day Financial District and shares a historic context and many architectural characteristics with contributors to surrounding historic districts including the Jackson Square Landmark District, the Commercial-Leidesdorff Conservation District, and the Front-California Conservation District, each of which represents an intact collection of post-1906 commercial buildings that remain embedded within a more recent urban fabric; now, therefore, be it

RESOLVED, That the Board hereby initiates landmark designation of the intact JonesThierbach Coffee Company located at 447 Battery Street; and, be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Board requests that the Planning Department prepare a Landmark Designation Report to submit to the Historic Preservation Commission for its consideration of the special historical, architectural, and aesthetic interest and value of the existing building at 447 Battery Street; and, be it

FURTHER RESOLVED, That the Board requests that the Historic Preservation Commission consider whether the existing building at 447 Battery Street warrants landmark designation, and submit its recommendation to the Board according to Article 10 of the Planning Code.
