13 Francisco citizens searched for a reliable and sustainable water supply; and

14 WHEREAS, In 1913, President Woodrow Wilson signed into law the Raker Act, which 15 provided San Francisco the rights of way to construct water and power facilities over federal 16 land in Yosemite and Stanislaus National Forest; and

17 WHEREAS, The Act allowed for the construction of O'Shaughnessy Dam in Hetch 18 Hetchy Valley to collect drinking water from the Tuolumne Watershed for use by the San 19 Francisco Bay Area and for the construction of water-collection and hydroelectric, clean 20 power-generating facilities stretching from the Sierras to the Bay Area; and

21 WHEREAS, In order to build the O'Shaughnessy Dam, the construction crews needed 22 a power source for electrical equipment and to light the round-the-clock work; and

23 WHEREAS, San Francisco Engineers selected a site 12 miles down the Tuolumne 24 River to construct the Early Intake Powerhouse, which, using water from Eleanor Creek and 25 three turbines, would provide clean-power to the O'Shaughnessy Dam Construction site; and

4 98.5 mile Moccasin-Newark power line delivering Hetch Hetchy power to the Newark
5 substation, allowing for clean power distribution to San Francisco, Modesto, and Turlock; and

6           WHEREAS, The clean power generated and delivered by the Hetch Hetchy Power
7 System is 100% greenhouse-gas free, and therefore helps to meet the goals of Ordinance No.
8 81-08, adopted by the Board and signed by the Mayor, which set a goal of San Francisco not 9 using any fossil-fuel power by 2030; and

10           WHEREAS, The clean power generated and delivered by the Hetch Hetchy Power

19 Community Choice Aggregation Bill, allowing local jurisdictions to purchase or develop their 20 own power on behalf of their community; the San Francisco Public Utilities Commission
21 (SFPUC) acts as the Community Choice Aggregator for the City and County of San Francisco
